The special court that gave its ruling today had the task of deciding whether there was enough evidence to warrant a second trial of

Mr. Menten, who worked for the Nazi SS in Poland as an interpreter. Delivering the ruling, Judge Stolk agreed that Mr. Menten had failed to provide written evidence to back up his claim of the promise of immunity. But he added that the court-accepted his statement that William Donker, then justice minister, told him in or shortly after . 1952 that he would not have to stand trial for war crimes.

Mr. Menten told the court last month that the justice minister in-formed him in 1952 that he had decided to drop charges against him because of the unreliability of testimony from witnesses in Poland and

The court also said that, in dealing with Mr. Menten, Dutch justice officials had breached the Europe-Human Rights convention, which stipulates that people charged with crimes should be prosecuted within a reasonable time after the offense.

Today's announcement was thought likely to cause further con-troversy in The Netherlands about the country's most bizarre war-crimes trial. In 1976 the government was seriously embarrassed when Mr. Menten, then under investigation, escaped and fled to Switzerland, from where he was

TOKYO, Dec. 4 (NYT) - The Big Mac in China? "Judging from the change in mood, I think they mean business," said Den Fujita, president of the Japanese affiliate of McDonald's, the American fast-food chain.

In October Mr. Fujita had heard a rumor that China was interested in his booming hamburger operation. He discounted it. But on Dec. 19 he will meet Chinese officials here for the first time, at the invitation of the Chinese Embassy, to "hear their ideas on McDonald's and China."

Mr. Fujita is one of many Japanese businessmen who are waking up with a start to the possibility that 850 million Chinese might provide them in the long run with a large consumer market - for fast food, soft drinks and even golf clubs, not to mention beavy industrial plant and sophisticated technology that China seeks from Japan and the West.

The agreement also would seem to put the French ahead of known German bidders for the building of a huge steel complex. An annex to the pact spells out more specific in-formation about industrial projects. They include:

 A group of steel mills with an annual capacity of 10 million tons. • A turn-key factory ready for the production of the material necfor hydroelectric power

• Two 600 megawatt thermoelectric plants and a magnesium

European Leaders Agree On Currency Measures

BRUSSELS, Dec. 4 (AP) — Leaders of the nine European Common Market nations agreed tonight on principles for a new monetary system. British sources said that London was delaying a decision to join, in bopes of more advantageous financial terms. A senior West German official,

British sources said that Prime Minister James Callaghan might make no final commitment on the system during the summit. He is said to be waiting for such concessions as an agreement to cut back the EEC's $10 billion annual program of agricultural subsidies. Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (WP)

— When Rhodesian guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe said goodbye to his Nigerian hosts and climbed aboard a waiting aircraft in Lagos four months ago, U.S. and British diplomats were convinced that they were within days of achieving the goal toward which they had been working a peace conference to end the war in Rhodesia. "We had the feeling that [U.S. Secretary of State] Cyrus Vance and [British Foreign Minister] David Owen were glued to their telephones waiting for the report of success from Nigeria," Mr. Mugabe's chief political aide, Edgar Tekere, recalled later.

To the handful of world leaders and diplomats who knew about it, the secret Aug. 19 meeting in Lagos did look like the penultimate stroke in an inspired diplomatic strategy that would not only halt the fighting be-tween blacks and whites that is oow devastatiog Rhodesia, but

Long-Standing Divisions

Even this summary may understate the turnabout that has occurred in the past four months in Southern Africa. There is now a good chance that instead of heading off a future tribal war for control of Rhodesia, the diplomatic strategy that brought the Nigerians so deeply into the Rhodesian crisis has deepened long-standing divisions within the ranks of the guerrillas and their African supporters, and has brought all-out civil war a step closer.
The Carter administration's beavy and proud investment in wooing key African states that had been hostile to the United States in the past also is being diminished by the fallout of the Rhodesian exercise. Nigeria's leaders feel they have been burned by their highly visible role, and last week they effectively withdrew from participating in the British-U.S. effort on Rhode-

Notes of distrust again have crept into the dialogue between Washington and African supporters of the Patriotic Front guernillas, headed jointly by Mr. Mngabe and his rival chief, Josbus Nkomo.

"We got out in front on de-livering the Patriotic Front to a peace conference because Vance promised he would deliver lan Smith," a key Nigerian official said to a U.S. visitor recently. "Instead, we were left hanging, while Smith went to Washington for a welcome from Vance." The secretary's October decision to reverse policy and grant a visa to Mr. Smith, the white prime minister of Rhodesia, has led Mr. Mugabe's group to call on the United States to end its 'biased" diplomatic involvement alongside the British in the Rhodesian crisis. Bleak Outlook parent then, the swing toward the bleak outlook and disillusionment of today was beginning even as Mr. Mugabe was boarding the personal aircraft of Nigerian bead of state Olusegun Obasanjo on Aug. 19 to fly to. Lusaka, Zambia, where the Nigerians thought be would agree formally to a power-sharing arrangement that had been secretly negotiated by Mr. Nkomo and Mr. Smith five days before.

What happened next is still a matter of sharp dispute and will oot be resolved until the veil of secrety around the wide-ranging contacts is lifted. But interviews with responsible Rhodesian, Nigerian, Tanzanian and U.S. sources provide a first clear outline of the tangled chain of events forged in Rhodesia by big-power diplomacy, guerrilla poli-tics and battlefield results. The events flow from two early decisions on Africa made by the Carter administration. One was to sponsor with Britain a plan for a peace conference involving Mr. Smith's government and the guerrillas. The British-U.S. plan quickly became the controversial focus of the peace-making efforts.

The other decision was to seek much stronger ties with Nigeria and the five front-line states that support the guerrillas, U.S. planners felt they could work with such once-hostile leaders as Tanzania's Julius Nyerere and Mozambique's Samora Macbel, as well as Zambia's Kenneth Kaunda, to promote a settlement that would prevent a repeat in groups that occurred in Angola once white rule ended there in

Military Advisers

The Angola civil war also en-trenched Soviet and Cuban military advisers in that country. U.S. Approach to Israel Boycott Works

By Steven Rattner

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (NYT) - A year and a half after enactment, the hotly disputed legislation designed to combat the Arab embargo of Israel and of companies involved with Israel is by general agreement having a positive effect.

While it is still too early for conclusive evidence of the law's impact to be available, several Arab countries have relaxed their demands on American companies to comply with the boycott strictures. And U.S. trade with the region has not only been maintained but has also been increased. Mnreover, as often happens with intensely debated questions, much of the controversy that surrounded passage of the measure appears to have ebbed.

Negative Certification

The Export Act was designed to prevent American companies from participating in the Arab boycott of companies involved with Israel. For example, the legislation prohi-bited negative certification, a requirement by some Arab countries that American companies selling to them certify that none of the goods in question came from Israel.

Similarly, American companies cannot now legally respond to Arab questions about whether they do business with Israel.

The result, according to the Commerce Department, is that the Arab countries bave largely dropped requirements for oegative certification and the like. Philips' new dictation system points the way to improved office efficiency through its amazing Mini-cassette 2 with Visual Mark & Find. This unique facility greatly simplifies dictation indexing, and allows separately identifiable messages to be recorded. No more hand-written notes; no separate strips to fill in. And it enables rapid access to any recorded item.

Mini-cassette 2 has, on each side, a special built-in indexing strip, After each dictation item, or before recording an important message for your secretary, simply press a button on the microphone, and a mark is made on the strip. At the same time, a special tone is recorded on the tape. From the marks, your secretary can see how much dictation has been recorded, and if the tape contains any messages. Of Dangers in Guyana Trip

Aide Says Ryan Wasn't Warned by U.S.

By Graham Hovey

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (NYT) - Rep. Leo Ryan's legislative counsel, who was critically wounded in the Guyana shooting that cost the congressman his life, said yes-terday that the State Department had never warned the Ryan party of any danger of violence in its mis-

Jacqueline Speier, a 28-year-old lawyer and an aide to the Demo-cratic congressman from California for nine years, spoke by telephooe from her bed in a Washington area hospital, where she is recovering from wounds inflicted by the People's Temple gunmen who killed Rep. Ryan and four others in Guyana on Nov. 18.

Miss Speier accused the State Department and the U.S. Embassy in Georgetown of indifference and settlement of Jonestown.

She said she had decided to speak to a reporter because she had become aware during her hospitalization of "a lot of inaccuracies" in some press accounts of the Ryan mission and of the role of the State Department and the embassy.

'Reluctance by State'

"The State Department at no time made it even remotely clear to the congressman or to myself that there would be danger encountered of the nature that we found," Miss

Miss Speier said: "On the face of it, that is io violatioo of the treaty the United States has with Guyana concerning consular services. On the basis of that treaty alone, it was incumbent on the ambassador to investigate.

She said that one factor in changing the ambassador's attitude to one of concern was the report furnished by some of the relatives at the meeting. In the report, she said, they cited the brushoff they had received at the Georgetown office of the People's Community, where they had gone to inquire about some children.

"The relatives had been told only to go to the U.S. Embassy." Miss Speier said. Miss Speier has been warned by federal security officers not to disclose the hospital in which she is a patient for fear of reprisals by surviving members of the People's Temple in this country.

Miss Speier said she had a foreboding about the trip to Guyana and had made out her will "hours before we left" and filed it in her office along with the will that Rep. Ryan had drawn two years ago.

Chinese Official Is Rehabilitated Posthumously

TOKYO, Dec. 4 (UPI) -- China has rehabilitated the reputation of the late Nan Han-chen, former chairman of the Bank of China, who was driven from office in 1967, according to a Radio Peking broad-

'Inept,' Say Medical Examiners

U.S. Handling of Bodies In Guyana Is Criticized

By Lawrence K. Altman

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, most important step in determine Del., Dec. 4 (NYT) - The government's actions concerning the bod-ies of 911 People's Temple mem-hers who died in Guyana two weeks ago was illogical and based on dubious legal principles, according to several medical examiners connected with the investigation of the deaths.

Six leading medical examiners said in interviews that they recog-nized the logistical and other difficulties involved in the task of identifying the bodies. But they said it was clear from developments that the government had no established procedure for medical investigation of such situations, and that similar mishandling would occur if another catastrophe, such as a plane crash, occurred today.

"Of the several ways the situa-tion could have been handled, certainly the one chosen was the most unsatisfactory," said Dr. Sidney Weinberg, medical examiner for Suffolk County, N.Y.

Failure Cited

The medical examiners describ as "incpt," "incompetent," "embarrassing" and "doing it backwards" what they contended was the government's failure to meet a ba-sic social and legal responsibility to determine the manner and cause of deaths of the cult members. They criticized, among other things, the failure thus far to perform autopsies and the embalming of bodies before collection of samples for toxicological tests. They also criticized the awkward steps by which the government, in a reversal of an earlier policy, now plans to do autopsies on 7 of the

Dr. Weinberg and other medical examiners said that the government should have sent a team of special-ists in forensic medicine to Guyana immediately to collect samples for toxicological tests, to take photographs of the scene, to do autop-sics, and to conduct as orderly an investigation as possible under the circumstances. Such a step would have greatly facilitated later medi-cal lovestigations. Dr. Weinberg

The medical experts also criticized, on medical and humanitarian grounds, the government's decision to fly the bodies here instead of to an Army mortuary in Oak-land, Calif., that would have been nearer to most relatives. Proximity to relatives would aid in a medical investigation, they said.

Distance a Factor

State Department officials said Dover was chosen because the shorter distance from Guyana allowed a quicker turnaround time for the flights removing the bodies. But the medical examiners contended that months of investigational time might have been loss for tional time might have been lost for the sake of saving a few hours of

So in Soviet shorthand, hasn't their understanding of detente become the current coinage of appeasement?

Opposition Chief Herrera Claims Venezuela Victory

CARACAS, Dec. 4 (UPI) — Luis Herrera Campins, of the oppositioo Social Christian Party, narrowly won Venezuela's presidential election yesterday, nearly complete unofficial returns indicated today. He has promised bold programs to fight inflation and crime.

The computer center of the Caracas television station Venevision reported that with almost 85 percent of the estimated 6.2 million ballots counted, Mr. Herrera led Luis Pinerua Ordaz of the governing Democratic Action Party by 2,238,334 votes to 2,197,421.

Official results were slow coming in, but they also showed Mr. Herrera — who campaigned with the help of U.S. media adviser David Garth — to be leading Mr. Pinerua by a narrow margin.

SWAPO Boycott Thought a Failure

Namibians Vote Heavily In First Biracial Elections

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa, Dec. 4 (AP) - Under the shadow of rifle-carrying South African soldiers, thousands of blacks went to the polls for the first time in Namibia today despite calls by black political leaders for a nationwide boycott of the elections.

Police Commissioner Moj. Gen. Vic Verster warned the South African-governed territory's 100,000 whites and 900,000 previously disfranchised blacks to be braced for the prospect of terror attacks by guerrillas opposed to the first mul-dracial elections.

The South-West Africa People's Organization, which is recognized by the United Nations as the repre-sentative of the people of Namibia, and the black Namibia National Front ordered supporters to boycon the elections, saving that they would be rigged in favor of pro-South African parties. SWAPO, fighting a 12-year guer-rilla war in Namibia, seeks to impose a leftist government that the South Africans fear wwould pro-vide a base for black nationalists to try to topple the Pretoria adminis-

Observers who visited remote polling stations reported a heavy vote. Reports from independent observers in Ovamboland, SWAPO's reputed majo source of support, in oorthern Namibia bordering Angola, indicated that the boycott had failed.

Electoral supervisors said that they bad ordered a halt to proce-dures at one Windhoek polling station where black voters were being brought to the ballot boxes by offi-cials of the South-African-backed

Democratic Turnhalle Alliance. Apart from the DTA, four other groups are contesting the elections

— two white rightist parties and two small multiracial movements.

Illiterate blacks were being handed ballot papers representing the parties by such symbols as an elephant, the two-fingered "V for victory" sign and a black-and-white handshake.

Most blacks interviewed here said that they were voting for the DTA. "It's the party that will bring peace," said Andreas Gomo, a black driver.

Most whites, on the other hand, said they had voted for rightist parties advocating cootinued white minority rule.

The elections are being beld despite calls by the United Nations, Presideot Carter and SWAPO to cancel them in favor of UN-organized elections, proposed by the world body for early next year.

South Africa, which has invited about 360 observers and journalists witness the elections, wants Namibians to elect their own repre-sentatives, who will then draft an independence constitution. They will also be asked to advise whether to allow UN elections.

South African Foreign Minister Roelof Botha last weekend affirmed his government's decision to cooperate with the United Nations in holding later independence elections. SWAPO and the NNF support UN elections.

One of our major skills is putting together the right package of Eurocurrency finance for our individual customers. In 1977 we managed forty syndicated loans totalling US S6 billion. In 1978 we have been one of the world's foremost banks in lead-managing syndicated Eurocurrency loans. We are underwriters in over 85% of all Eurobond issues, and we are active as managers in this field. So you can see that whenever you need finance, it is worthwhile asking us first about getting the resources together

Knife-Edge in Iran

Events in Iran are approaching the edge of the knife. The shah himself has executed a tactical withdrawal from the forefront of the struggle to save his throne and left the joh to the temporary administration of his generals. The generals have decided to enforce their will, and the people are reacting violently. Whether the violence will grow sufficiently during the holy month of Moharram to bring about the overthrow of the regime is now the only question.,

It is clearly difficult for Westerners to weigh the strength and validity of the internal elements which make up the conflict in Iran. Western opinion has therefore polarized in support of the one known quantity, which is the shah and the throne itself. Ranged against him is a bewildering assembly of which the strongest, though not the most cohesive, group is the religious opposi-tion of conservative Moslems inspired by the Ayatollah Khomeini, who is exiled in France. He is calling on Iranians to resist the government across the board.

Then there is the old bourgeois National Front which gained fame in the early 1950s when Premier Mohammed Mossadegh forced the shah to flee the country for a hrief time. More important is the discontented new middle class spearheaded by students and civil servants. And now the Tudeh Communist Party has made a reappearance, at least in denunciatory government communiques. Finally there is the poor mass of the Iranians themselves whose chronic grievances, barely yet articulated, are there presumably waiting to support the highest bidder.

It is easy to point out how the Shah has mismanaged things during his 37 years on

It is easy, too, to describe the devastation which the maldistribution of oil wealth has visited on a traditional and fragile society. But if the shah does go, it is hard to see how the country can escape a full-scale civil war, a war which would throw up unforeseeable leadership or no leadership at all. For it is clear that the generals the shah has put in charge are not leaders but custodians.

So the stakes involve not only the fate of a government but the fate of the country. Iran is of immense strategic importance to the West, not only because of its oil but because of its geographical position. Its geography alone, before its oil mattered much, made it a prize the Soviet Union was willing to risk a great deal for 30 years ago. Since then Iran has emerged as an essential piece on Western geopolitical and economic planning, a bas-tion in fact. Obviously, the West's primary concern is that the bastion should not crum-

Unfortunately, the news from Tehran indicates that the bastion may be crumbling fast. The generals have shown themselves so far fairly determined to uphold law and order in the streets if they can persuade the middle class to abide by their orders. But popular emotion aroused and orchestrated for its own sake hy the mullahs may create a tidal wave that would sweep all before it, leaving a desert in its wake, a desert in which Western interests and a Western power would be hard put to maintain any genuine presence.

A Most Depressing Tale

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK — One day last June my eye was caught by a headline on Page 1 of the Times of Namibia: Dangerous Waters will surely demand that the United Nations

London. "Vasectomies for Coypu Suggested," it said. The Times reported that the government's Coypu Strategy Group was worried. Britain now had more than 8,000 wild coypu, "large rodents with bearty appetites for farm crops such as carrots." Coypu-trappers did not show much enthusiasm for their work; and besides, animal-lovers released coypu from the traps. Hence the headine-making idea.

The story quoted Dr. Morris Gosting of the Coypu Research Laboratory in Norwich as saying that he had once eaten cooked coypu nt a dinner of the London Zoological Society. "It was not very exciting." Gosling said.

Riveting Report

The world will not soon again read the like of the riveting coypu report. The Times has shut down. its publication suspended indefinitely by management in an attempt to stop union harassment. And with it goes a unique expres-sion of the endearing quirkiness in the British character.

The labor dispute at the Times is no quaint affair. The intensity of feelings between labor and management makes the recent newspaper strike in New York look like a picnic catered by Fortnum & Mason. Management has closed down to try to end a state of industrial anarchy, and it says it will never reopen unless the unions come around

There are 65 different union chapels — bargaining units — at the Times and Sunday Times. They make agreements and immediately ignore them. Week after week different chapels demand extra pay-ments to get the paper out. Man-agement resists this virtual black-mail at its peril: Lightning strikes have cost the papers 13 million copies this year.

Lately it has been discovered that some work crews include the names of people who do not actually appear for work; their pay enve-lopes are shared among the others. Some casual workers sign on with fake names and addresses - "M. Mouse, Sunsot Boulevard" was one - so they pay no income tax. If management tries to do anything about such thievery, it again risks

Conditions at Times Newspapers Ltd. are an extreme example of the lawless labor relations that plague Britain. The country pays a heavy price economically. But it is worse to see feudal unions threaten the existence of Britain's still remarka-

Another depressing note about the struggle at the Times is that the chic British left, in such organs as the New Statesman, sees the whole thing as a capitalist plot. British trade unions are so reactionary that the summit it snowed heavily, and it is extraordinary in general to see them embraced as comrades by the This he threw, with due ceremony, intellectual left. In the case of the print unions it is grotesque.

This he threw, with due ceremony, across the border from Kenya into Uganda."

print unions it is grotesque.

Suspension of the Sunday Times deprives Britain of what may be its most important newspaper. Under a scrappy editor, Harry Evans, the paper has challenged the country's deep tradition of official secrecy. It has proved, contrary to the current U.S. press mystique, that a newspa-per can get vital information from confidential sources without any special legal protection.

Eccentricity

But the daily eccentricity of the Times, its curious flavor of clubrooms and Oxford Colleges, will also be hard to do without. It is not only the news columns, with their occasional glimpse of animal-loving Britons wondering how to deal with ourushing coypu. The quality of the Times comes as much from its readers, who write letters of a kind that no other paper gets — or at least publishes.

The letters explore points of wonderful irrelevance: Who had the first picnic of the year? (Five people wrote to say they had picnicked on New Year's Eve.) Did people in country houses at the turn of the century eat their por-ridge standing? When did the casual greeting kiss come into fashion?

Then there are letters that celebrate what could be called postimperial feats of mock derring-do. Last June Mr. C.E.C. Dickens

"Sir. Some years ago I was bring-ing a destroyer home from the Far East and was required to report my position twice a day. One evening, I saw that we would be passing close to where the Greenwich Meridian touched the Equator, so arranged to arrive there dead no midnight. Once there I altered my course so my position signal read: At 0000 my position Lantude 00000'N, Longitude 00000'E. Course 000o.

Speed 0.
"I had considered saying I was Nowbere but thought (probably correctly) that Their Lordships would not be amused."

would not be amused."

Shortly Before the Times closed, it published this letter from Mr. E.H. Cooke-Yarborough:

"Sir, My son writes from Kenya that on Oct. 20 he and a friend climbed Mount Elgon (14,152 feet), on the Kenya-Uganda border. At the my mit it spouged beauty and he was able to make a snowball.

The China Card, Peking-Style

PEKING—Contending that the Soviet Union has surpassed U.S. oaval strength in the Western Pacific and has established Asian footholds in Afghanistan and Vietnam Communist China is pressing hard for not only diplomatic relations with Washington but a strong Chinese-U.S. alliance against Mos-

That was the foreign policy theme sounded in our two-hour exclusive interview with Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, strongman of the Chinese regime. So anxious did he appear to form this alliance that he appear to form this alliance that he suggested retaining a special status for Taiwan and even recognized an important role for South Korea's and Communist government in Korean unification. Thus, while the China card has

No Time Limit

No Time Limit

In his on-the-record but not-for-direct-quotation interview, Teng told us the sooner normalization takes place the better. But he set no time limit and implied no threats about what might happen if the Americans tarry. Neither he nor lower-ranking officials we met uttered a word about delayed normalization hringing reprisals against U.S. husinessmen, much less a Chinese overture to Moscow. It is a fact in the Pacific, Teng told us, that the Soviet Navy has surpassed the strength of the U.S. Seventh Fleet. Beyond that, he stressed the pro-Soviet coup in Afghanistan and Moscow's alliance with Vietnam as part of the so-called Soviet-Asian security system.

called Soviet-Asian security system. This, said Teng, is closely related to Soviet naval strength; this is one thing and not two different things. To block the Russians, he pointed to the new Chineso-Japanese "peace and friendship" treaty, Much as Tokyo denies it, said Teng, the treaty's anti-hegemony clause is aimed squarely at Moscow. That produces better security in the region, he said, but a U.S.-Chinese treaty would bring better security to the whole world. The

'Scholarship Is for Sale'

By Daniel S. Greenberg

WASHINGTON — As disputes flourish at several U.S. universities over the conditions that accompany donations of Mideast oil money for professorships and research programs, the faraway benefactors ought to understand an essential but little-discussed fact: It is not difficult to seduce academe. Therefore, there is no need to enshrine these deals in emotionstirring charters of rights and obli-gations, for, if the money is there, dear sheikhs, they'll beat you to bed 9 out of 10 times.

In making these observations, there is no intent here to calibrate the moral recritude of academe versus other segments of society. Rather, the object is to demonstrate that many of these eruptions of academic purity have been need-lessly ignited by the donors' mis-guided demands for some continu-ing measure of influence over what they are financing.

of contemporary academe, which, like any gentry fallen on hard times, tends to be alert for incoming signs of respect and discreet op-portunities for material improvement. By recognizing this, even the seamy Rev. Moon enjoys felicitous relations with many international celebrities of scholarship, hundreds of whom — including Nobel laureares, chaired professors, and the like — annually show up, at Moon's expense, for his big pow-for academe concern institutions arrangements, such as endowments for chairs or funds to establish and operate research centers. In connection with such ongoing arrange-ments, the critical element is form, which, even for penurious institu-tions — perhaps especially for them - requires that the benefactor show reverence for academic integrity. This is easily achieved by inding over the money, no strings attached, with the simple specification that is to be used, at the university's discretion, for research stalled, for the much-needed money is not accompanied by any intru-sion on academe's venerable values.

Subtle Process

Not altogether, for now enters the principle that the milkman's horse does not have to be told where to stop. Money for expansion is so scarce in the academic world that even if a donor really means "no strings," the thought that there might be more where that came from will turn the recipients' attention to trouble-avoidance. The process is a subtle one, fed by hudget pressures that create tensions among colleagues as, for example, travel funds are in short supply or research projects limp along because of sparse funds. JAKARTA, Indonesia, Dec. 4 (AP) — The government today an-nounced the release of 4,228 prisoners held without trial since a Communist coup failed in 1965, including 1,320 at the penal colony on Buru Island.

The mass release was the third this year, bringing the total number for 1978 to 9,738. But more than 10,000 persons accused of involvement in the plot are still imprisGrowth Has Slowed From Earlier Forecasts

U.S. Population Peak of 253 Million Is Seen in 2015

By Boyce Rensberger

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (NYT) — The population of the United States is growing much more slowly than was forecast noly a few years ago, and a leading demographer has calculated that the number of Americans is likely to peak at 253 million in the year 2015.

This is well below the forecast of 300 million by the year 2000 that had been widely used until fairly recently. The population of the United States is currently estimated to be about 220 million.

Dr. Charles Westoff, director of Princetnn University's Office of Population Research, suggested in a report in this month's issue of Scientific American that new marriage and fertility patterns, which are lowering the birth rate, are likely to continue beyond the year 2015, producing an eventual de-2015, producing an eventual de-cline in the American population. The social and economic effects of this trend, with more and more older people and fewer yning peo-ple, could greatly alter the charac-ter of U.S. society, according to Dr. Westoff, who is a former executive director of the President's Commis-sion on Population Growth and the American Future.

Although the possible conse-quences of the trend may seem remote, Dr. Westoff notes that the struggling to cope with population declines.

Negative Rates

East and West Germany, Luxembourg, Austria and the United Kingdom have birth rates that are below their death rates and, if it were not for immigration, their po-pulations would all be shrinking. Belgium and Sweden are nnw elose to the balance point where births equal deaths. Denmark, Switzerland, France, Norway, Italy, the Netherlands, Finland and Hungary are close behind, all with births outnumbering deaths by fewer than five a year for every 1,000 persons. Close behind these countries is the United States, where the comparable figure is now down to about 6.5 a year.

Although some demographers have suggested that a new baby boom could occur in the United States in the 1990s, Dr. Westoff discounts that possibility. The rea-son, he contends, is that the status of women is likely to continue to change in ways that are already sharply reducing the number of winner who bear children. Dr. Westoff also notes that no second-generation baby boom has occurred in other developed coun-

in several European countries that have already passed the point of zero population growth and are nations have experienced a fairly steady decline through zero growth until the native population has

Among the factors contributing to the declining growth rate are a diminishing number of women who marry and the postponement of marriage to a later age. In 1960, for example, about 71 percent of wom-en between the ages of 20 and 24 were married. By 1978, the proportion had dropped to 52 percent. The longer childbearing is post-poned, the fewer fertile years a woman has remaining.

Although this trend is uften riewed as a new phenomenon, Dr. Westoff notes that it is actually a return to the marriage rate of 1940 and not far from the pattern of the entire century. In 1900, for exam-ple, more than half the women from 20 tn 24 were still single.

Dr. Westoff also notes that the declining hirth rate in the United States is not the phenomenon it is nften made out to be.
"The decline is the long-term reality," he wrote in his report. "The birth rate has been coming down more or less steadily for the past 200 years in this country — with the exception of one period. The real question, and the more

ed for more than a decade after World War IL"

Dr. Westoff cited "a definite movement away from spinsterhood and nway from childless and one-child marriages." The boom, he notes, was not primarily caused by parents' having more than two chil-dren but by an increase in the number of adults who became parents and had two children.

A related phenomenon is the increasing number of women entercreasing number of women enter-ing the work force. In 1960, less than two-fifths of U.S. women had jobs. By 1977, three-fifths worked and it is projected that about two-thirds of U.S. women will have en-tered the work force in another dec-

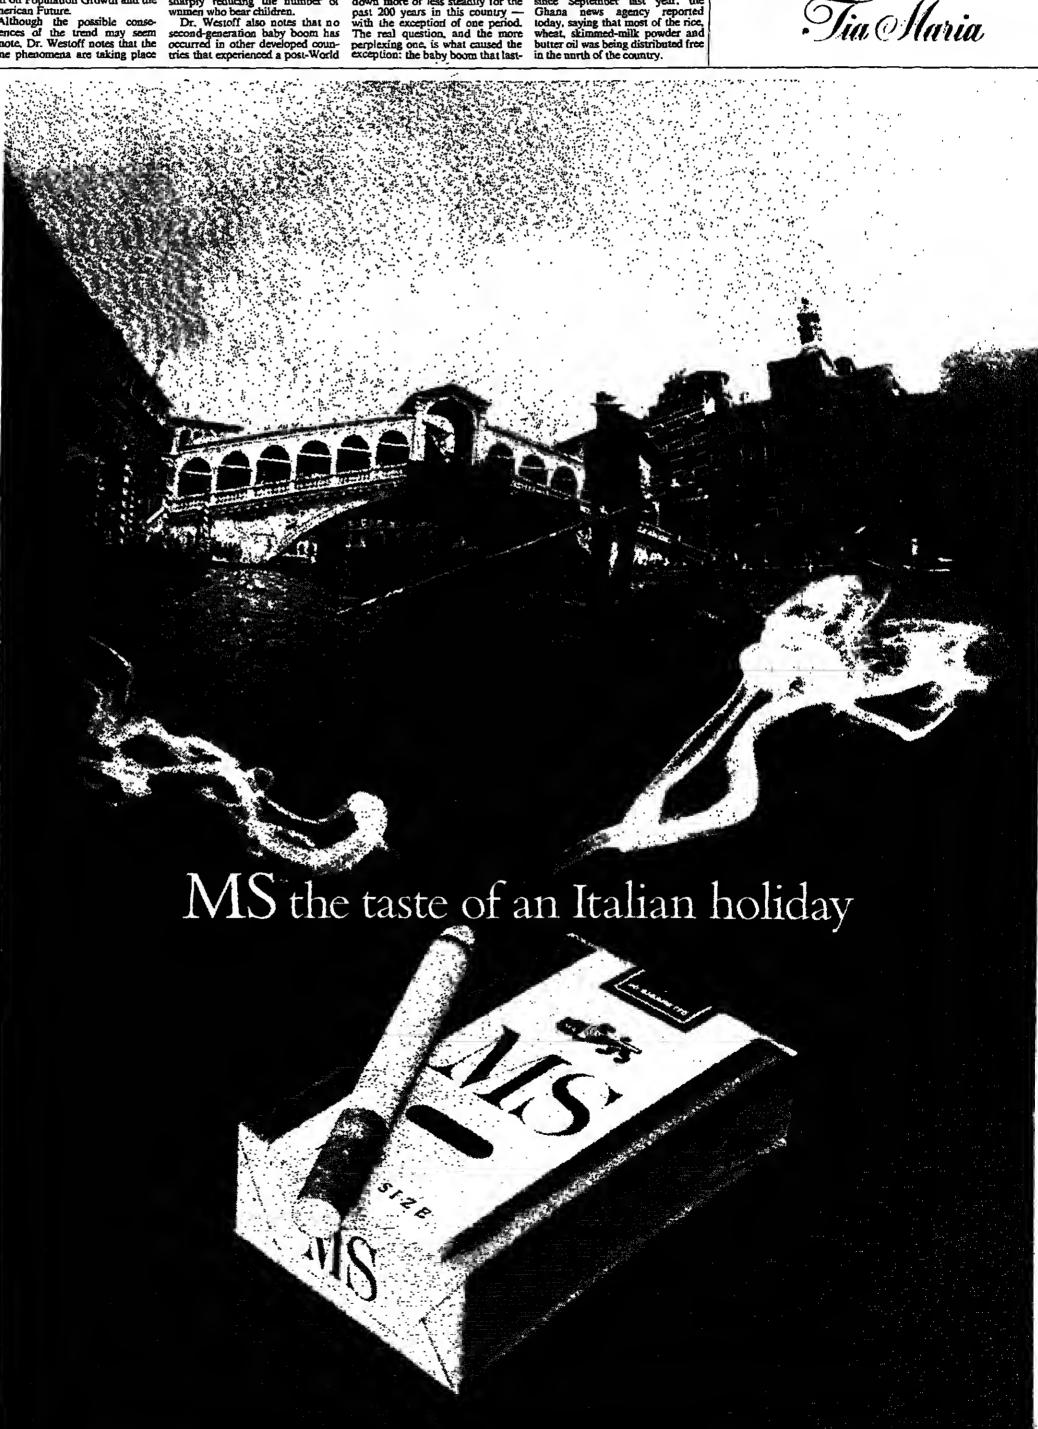

Dr. Westoff said that, if current trends persist, about 30 percent of U.S. women now of childbearing age will never have children. This would be a record, surpassing the previous high of 22 percent in 1908.

The institution of having city folk give the farmers a hand with potato digging is as chronic as agri-cultural disaster in a country where calamities are frequent.

The government, which markets most agricultural produce, has long paid collective and state farms so little for potatoes that many of them lose money on the crop. Most potatoes are still being dug by hand, and for those that are machine-harvested, the rate of damage is high. When potatoes are transported by rail and truck and unloaded automatically into rehouses, as much as 90 percent of the crop is so badly beaten that it is fed to livestock.

This goes mostly for "socialized" potatoes, but most potatoes in the Soviet Union are still grown pri-vately. Every collective or state farmer has the right to a small private plot, and many use it to grow potatoes to sell in city farmer markets, known for the best quality, but also the highest prices, of fresh produce.

Why the socialized sector. comprising the collective and state farms, does so much worse is a mystery that agricultural managers. anners, journalists, and party officials have yet to resolve.

Kapitolina Kozhevnikova, a correspondent for the weekly newspa-per Literatunaya Gazeta, labored over the question of how to get better results out of forced potato diggers. She came up with what she said was the novel suggestion that instead of drafting city people, the farms ought to hire them for pay— "That's right," she wrote, "hire

sharply reducing capital gains, died in his sleep today of a heart attack. Rep. Steiger, recently elected for his seventh flouse term, had a rep-utation for hard work and good humor which made him one of the most popular members of Congress. He was a diabetic, but had no known history of heart disease,

As a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Steiger became a key power behind the movement to lower capital gains taxes. The Steiger amendment would have re-duced the maximum long-term capital gains tax rate to 25 percent. The old top rate was 35 percent but could rise as high as 49 percent be-cause of the effect of the minimum tax on some individuals,

The final bill lowered the maximum rate to 28 percent and made other changes which Rep. Steiger hoped would promote investment. Rep. Steiger was born in Osh-kosh. Wis. He was a three-term member of the Wisconsin State Assembly before beginning the first of six terms in Congress at the age of 28. In November, he won re-election to his seventh term beginning in January.

Sale of 'Chanel Collection' Draws Mixed Reaction

By Hebe Dorsey

ONDON, Dec. 4. (1HT) - The Chanel sale at Christie's last weekend brought £68.655 (about $138,000) for the clothes and £21,420 for the jewelry (all of it fake). The sale represented clothes collected by Lilian Grumbach who. the catalog said, was the late designer's closest colleague for the last 14 years of her life. (Actually. says the House of Chanel, Mrs. Grumhach left the firm in 1970. one year before Miss Chanel's death.)

Reaction to the affair from the House of Chanel was cool and skeptical:

"We know nothing about that sale and are not interested." said the firm's Marie-Louise de Clermont-Tonnerre. "Frankly, we ques-tion whether all those cluthes were authentic. Everybody knew that Chanel owned very few clothes and often said. 'I live in three suits.'

Cleverty Worded

In fact, although the sale catalog was eleverly worded — "Sale of the personal collection of Chanel" — a close look at the program shows that relatively few items were actually worn by the late designer.

"Fiddlesucks." responded Christie's spokesman Mark Wrey.
"We're sure that a lot of those clothes belonged to Chanel, be-worked in overalls. She always worked in a suit, complete with her Mrs. de Clermont-Tinnere also hat and all her jewelry. Frankly, we objected to two lots of white pique feel Mrs. Grumbach should have dnnated those clothes to a museum.

While the money involved was not huge by Christie's standards, the house felt that the sale was well worthwhile. "It was very glamo-rous," said Wrey. "We had over 1,000 people for champagne and 11 international televisioo networks. While we did not make it black-tie. a lot of people came in dressed to the hilt. The rooms were decorated with lilies and gladioli, Chanel's favorite flowers, and were furnished with French Impressionist paintings and 18th-century furniture which bappen to go on the block

Closed-Circuit TV

Models paraded the clothes in three rooms, with the auctioneers coordinated by closed-circuit televisinn. On hand were museum representatives, antique dealers and private buyers. The most notable absentee was Diana Vreeland, head of the Metropolitan Museum's Fashion lostitute in New York and famous for her fashion retrospectives.

The most interesting lots were bought by museums, with the top price of £2,400 paid by an Oslo museum for a beige suit bound with braid and a pink silk shirt — the catalog said Chanel designed it for herself and wore it often. A black, sleeveless side-buttoning dress (again, according to the catalog, made by Miss Chanel for herself) went to the Victoria and Albert Museum for £1,200. Some of the highest amounts were paid for accessories, many of boutique for a fraction of the auction prices. For instance, an oval filigree brooch of simulated rubies and emeralds and beld together by passe fetched a stiff £1,000 from Robin Symes, an English antique dealer acting for a Geneva colleague. The brooch is said to have been Chanel's favorite.

£400 Handbag

The Smithsonian Institution of Washington, D.C., paid a surprising £400 for a handhag of navy-blue quitted jersey with gilt-chain handle; its equivalent can be had today at the Paris Chanel bourique for about half that price.

One of the largest private customers was Baroness David de Rothschild who bought costume jewelry lots totaling £700 and a little hlack dress for £1,500.

Among the odds and ends were three pairs of silk pajamas (not a word whether or not they were worn by Mademoiselle Chanel); five pairs of gloves (we are told they belonged to Miss Chanel) which went to Lord Kenilworth for £46, and several pairs of sling-back

An interesting facet of the show was that, according to Wrey, it made no difference whether Chanel actually wore the clothes. That she presumably cut and sewed them, or supervised their sewing, apparently was enough for collectors to pay prices that were often comparable to what the new equivalents would bring today.

300 Years Back

Gunter Grass Drums Up Past in West Germany

By Alison Smale

BONN (UPI) — In the early 1960s Gunter Grass was the enfant terrible of German literature, attacking his fellow countrymen for repressing the Nazi past which he recalled vividly in novels like "The Tin Drum," "Cat and Mouse" and Dog Years."

In the late 1960s Grass was on the attack again, this time from election platforms in support of the liberal Willy Brandt and his Social Democrat party.

Now Grass has launched a new campaign. He wants Germans to look back 300 years to Baroque literature and the events of the Thirty Years War, which he thinks throw light on Germany today. Grass began his latest crusade at a recent reading at Bonn Universi-ty. Most of the 2,000 students expressed surprise when Grass announced he would read an unfinished story portraying a fictitious meeting of Baroque literati at e. 90 miles north of bonn

"Where?" stiouted one listener. "Telgte," Grass replied. "I know, today we all know Spain better than our own German territory."

Ignorance

German literature.
He cites the United States "where oo one today talks about Vietnam" — and "stagnating litera-ture in Britain, where people live as if they still had the empire," as examples of the dangers of not looking back into the national past. Grass said Germans could hardly fail to remember their recent history — a war lost, a country divided. Grass insisted he did not want to see Germans hounded by the Nazi "dog years." but said that they cannot be forgotten. He called on his Bonn audience to look back 300 years and draw conclusions for the present.

"The Baroque period was the beginning of German literature," Grass said after his reading.

"More importantly, the Thirty Years War and the Peace of Westphalia [in 1648] made sure the north-south division in Germany was the decisive division. Muenster and Mecklenburg [two North German cities now separated by the West-East German border] have more in common today than Muenster and a southern city in West Germany," Grass said. Skeptical Listeners

London Bridge Is Coining Pounds

By Robert D. Hershey Jr. T ONDON (NYT) - In its

970 years of recorded history. Loodon Bridge has earned many claims to fame and affect

Its various spans have carried uncounted millions across the Thames and housed generations of merchants and artisans. Serving for more than five centuries as Londoo's lifeline, its decks supported shops, mills and chap-els and its arches foiled a revolution. From its gates were exhibit-ed the heads of criminals and martyred saints.

The beloved bridge inspired nursery rhymes and was revered like a medieval cathedral. It attracted bequests dedicated "to God and the bridge." While one of its incarnations was moved to Arizona, a newer version of the span still graces the River Thames. Almost unknown, however, is the fact that London Bridge is also a monument to shrewd investment, its managers having parlayed early legacies into an uncalculated fortune now worth perhaps $75 million. Its trust fund, which has paid for three nearby bridges as well, is proba-bly the longest established fund

"I know of no older one," said Richard Luff, who as surveyor of the Corporation of London is in charge of managing the bulk of the holdings. Real Estate

The money — it really does belong to the bridge itself, not to the governmental unit — has al-ways been invested almost exclusively in real estate. The pieces of land and other items bequeathed to the hridge as early as 1122 have been leased, swapped, developed and even used as collateral for loans, but only rarely sold.

"What it proves," Luff said in his Guildhall office the other day, "is that if you're investing over centuries, there really has been no substitute for bricks and

In the face of panics, depressions and all other financial misfortunes known to man, Luff said, "there has been no time I am aware of in which it failed to provide what was required." The origins of the fund, which is called Bridge House Estates, is lost io the mists of time. Most probably, it was set up for build-ing ooe of the wooden Saxon bridges. In the 12th century the monks of Bermondsey were drawing a grant of five shillings a year from lands owned by the Its first real growth oppears to have accompanied the great, 19-arch bridge started by Peter of Cnlechurch in 1174. It took 32 years to span the river's heavy tides with stone but the completed bridge was one of the marvels of the medieval world. It stood for 625 years until replaced by the Rennie bridge in 1831; this is the one that was bought by the McCulloch Oil Corporation, and reconstructed at Lake Havasu, Ariz, in 1971. Third Incarnation

Over the years, Bridge House Estates has rebuilt London Bridge and financed construcand maintenance of the neighboring Blackfriars, Southwark and Tower bridges as opment created commercial demand, not the other way around, and he decreed that houses and shops should be built on the bridge. The rents contributed to the upkeep.

The income of Bridge House Estates.. much of it from land in Finsbury Circus and less elegant Southwark, was about $5 million

Conny Managers

The latest bequest came in 1675, when one Roger Gooday left 20 shillings a year from "The Bull," presumably a pub. Since then, the growth of Bridge House Estates has been due entirely to the market and the canniness of its managers.

Trustees have traditionally sold surplus bridge material and rented out idle equipment. The Rennie bridge, in fact, earned money both before it was com-pleted and after it closed. In 1828 the curious public was charged a "moderate" fee to climb around the construction well. The third incarnation of the bridge was opened in 1973 by Queen Elizabeth IL

One of the early legacies was a 76-acre farm, which besides corn, rye and oats is believed also to have provided timber for repairs to the bridge and its other property. But not long af-ter the land was developed, beginning in the 1880s, the Lease-hold Reform Act froze the ground rent for 2,000 years, and now two-thirds of the 750 houses have been sold.

In researching the subject, bowever, Luff discovered that Kiog John, of Magna Carta fame, was probably the first developer.

"The one thing that has struck me," he declared, "has been the constant reminder that there is oothing new under the sun even in the property world."

King John believed that devel-

Bridge House Estates has also managed to fend off most attempts by politicians who eyed its riches. It failed, however, to prevent Henry III, King John's successor, from seizing the money and ordering some to be paid his consort. Queen Eleanor. Bridge funds were also used to support troops on the continent and in Ireland.

Although the fund assets are today still tied up in property, Luff says he makes sure it remains "a cash-flow operation." He and his fellow trustees also

"In any rationalization I do, I'm not looking 20 years ahead," Luff declared. "I'm looking at the next century."

Specifically, the past year have the foodman, "If you mean a 10-point that definition very clear, and showed how anti-family it is." running into town and onto the cover of Time magazine a little over a year ago as 20,000 women gathered here to chart a course against sex discrimination.

In perhaps the most widely publicized women's gathering ever— financed with five million federal dollars—they adopted a 25-point plan of action calling for billions of dollars in federal funds and a nationwide drive to bring equality between the sexes.

The emotion of the moment was electric: The call went up for the right to abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, gay rights and an end to double discrimination against minority women. "Houston" was transformed from place to event, to turning point. A year later, however, only modest gains can be counted in the effort to make a reality of any national plan of action. And leaders concede that a growing public attitude against governmental spending, against taxation, against deficits — against government itself — may stymic many crucial proposals. 'A few Slices' "We didn't get the whole pie, hut

"It's not a backlash against the women's movement," adds Barbara Duke, a director of the National Organization for Women. "We're a extensive feminist political network that can be so effective that many people credit it with having forced ongress' vote to extend the ratification period for the ERA.

In California, tax-cutting forces with by Proposition 13 has begun to take its toll, and some county women's commissions have been eliminated or weakened. And programs to help battered wives, al-coholic women and delinquent girls face questionable futures. At a recent gathering in Sacramento of county women's representatives, a common theme was the possibility of having to turn to more private funding and to increased use of vol-unteers — an ironic twist for a movement that has often viewed voluntarism by women as a sort of unpaid exploitation.

Many women leaders also see a particular unemployment problem or women if the recession leads to "last hired, first fired" layoffs. A number of women's group leaders see the biggest success of the past year as the 39-month ex-tensing for ERA ratification. A record number of women were elected to office this fall, according to the National Women's Political Caucus, which sees resultant gains in ERA support in state legislatures that have not yet ratified it.

Schlafly disputes that claim, pointing to an advisory referendent on ERA that failed in Nevada and a state constitution equal rights, amendment that failed in Florida.

Domestic consolidated turnover of Thyssen AG showed a 25-percent drop to 192 billion DM with nrder inflow up 7 percent at 20.4 bil-lion DM due in large capital investment orders. However, thyssen said this was not yet reflected in turnover due to the long duration of the orders.

GM Sees Record Sales Next Year

General Motors chairman Thomas Murphy, in a direct challenge to economists and analysts who are direct challenge to economists and analysts who are forecasting a drop in U.S. car sales next year, predicts that total deliveries of new cars will rise to record levels in 1979 and that domestically built vehicles will increase their share of the market. Overall, he says be expects continued growth of the U.S. economy and improved consumer confidence to provide automakers a boom year with sales at 11.5 million units, including imports. His forecast is in sharp contrast with the view of a growing number of economists and analysts who are predicting that total car sales next year will decline to about 10.4 million units from about 11.3 million this year due to a lack exporting countries were the largest net borrowers of new funds from the international banking system in the second quarter this year and, for the first time since the oil-price increase in 1973, actually drew down their deposits, the Bank for International Settlements (BIS) reported over the weekend.

It said that members of the Or-ganization of Petroleum Exporting Countries borrowed $2 billion and withdrew $3.3 billion. This development reflected the rapid contraction in these countries' payments surpluses, and the $5.2-billion decline in their gross official reserves during the first half this year, it

The withdrawal of oil funds was fairly widespread. Among countries drawing down their deposits were Saudi Arabia, Libya, Iran and Venezuela. In contrast, new borrowings OPEC funds withdrawn, or about $2.7 billion, was in dollars, while about one-third of the oew borrowing was also in the U.S. currency.

In reporting oo the international banking scene, BIS said the dollar value of external assets of banks in the Group of 10 countries, along with those of Switzerland, Austria, Denmark, Ireland and the branches of U.S. banks in offshore centers grew by $22 billing to $733 billion in the second quarter. If doublecounting from redeposits of funds between banks was excluded, the increase was about $15 billion, or about the same as in the first quarter this year. However, the BIS

Slowdown Held Short-Lived

U.S. Money-Growth Surge Is Believed in the Offing

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP-DI) - funds transfer in which banks can The recent sharp slowing in the switch funds from a customer's growth of the U.S. money stock interest-bearing savings account to may simply be the calm in the eye of the storm, according to some

They believe that the recent slowdown will be short-lived and that a renewed surge in money growth may be in the offing. If accurate, this means further in-creases in money-market interest rates, which already are close to the peaks of the 1974 credit crunch.

Other analysis, however, say the money-growth slowdown repre-sents a fundamental economic change that portends a cooling of the business picture and the allevia-tion of upward interest-rate pres-sures. The high-interest-rate hawks ebarge that the Federal Reserve System still has not tightened credit conditions enough, and instead has been supplying funds in the bank-ing network at a rate they say will again spur money growth.

In the past three months, the monetary base has risen at a 10.8percent annual rate. Money-supply growth has slowed sharply in recent weeks. For example, M-1, the basic money stock, grew at a 4.9-percent annual rate in the three months ended Nov. 22, down from an almost 10-percent growth rate in the three months ended Oct. 18. The growth of M-2, a broader measure, slowed to 8.3 percent from 10.7 percent.

Some analysts believe the slowing basically reflects the recent au-thorization of new types of banking accounts, such as the automatic

INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES

Interstate Investments is a multi-national investment management organization with an established record of service and reliability.

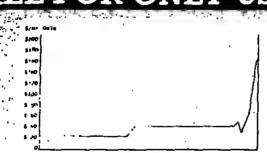

Over the past decade, we at Interstate have correctly forecast the principal trend in the market from time to time so that our clients not only made money in the Soaring Sixties, but also conserved their capital and increased its value in the Turbulent Seventies.

Our publication INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES has, in the Seventies, become one of the world's leading publications analysing and forecasting the trends in the classical investment instruments; industrial shares, bonds, money markets, gold and gold shares, in which we deal exclusively. INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES is designed to advise both large and small investors of the prevailing trend of financial markets in the principal marketplaces of the world, as well as making specific recommendations to buy and sell securities or hold cash or gold.

Our statisticians and analysts continuously study economic, financial and political developments, in the principal industrial countries which effect their markets, ranking those countries which we consider at any given time to be in the top ten according to investment merit, with particular emphasis on the United States, Europe and Japan.
Our weekly letters function as a valuable guide to subscribers in making their investment commitments in specific securities in specific countries and over the years they have consistently enabled investors to conserve their capital and earn a return on it on recognized stock exchanges, money markets and in gold. OUR RECORD FOR BEING RIGHT

- While the fact, that our advice has produced excellent re-sults over the past difficult decade, does not prove that it will produce similar results in the period ahead, it is a better guarantee than you can obtain from almost anyone else.
- Acting on our advice, investors participated to the fullest extent in the great bull market in the US in the 1960's. In the Spring of 1969 we advised clients to sell their industrial stocks in New York completely thus making - money and conserving it. In 1970 we advised clients to purchase gold and gold shares
- (50 percent of portfolio assets) while continuing to conserve the balance of their capital. In 1974 we advised clients to sell gold and gold shares, again to conserve profits made.
- In 1975 we again advised the purchase of industrial shares in New York and elsewhere, taking profits in 1977.
 But that is the past! What about now and 1979? What about Japan - France? Will the price of gold move up to US $ 600 per ounce? You can receive our views on these and other questions, as well as specific investment re-

THE COUP By John Updike. Knopf. 299 pp. $8.95. Reviewed by William McPherson

TO STEAL a phrase from that aware, furthermore, that climate notable phrasemaker Gore Vidal. "The Coup" is a novel in the form of a memoir. It is John Updike's eighth novel (and 22nd book) in 19 years, and, on the surface at least, it is very different from its predecessors.

The narrator is the commanderin-chief of the armed forces, minister of national defense, and president of Kush, a fictional constitutional monarchy south of the Sahara — "with the constitution suspended and the monarch deposed." The terrain - a large, drought-ridden and destitute enclave locked between the desert and the forest — is as exotically different from Updike's familiar Penn-sylvania and Massachusetts sylvania and Massachusetts landscapes as Col. Hakim Felix Ellellou is from Rabbit Angstrom. But "the great urgencies of sex and death," as Updike called them in "Rabbit, Run," the Calvinist temperament (speaking this time in the accents of Islam), and the bemused arision stark and furnivat once revision, stark and funny at once, remain the same.
"The life of a charismatic national leader cannot be all roses," the colonel notes with his accustomed stoicism in the face of adversity as well as glory, and at this moment his life is anything but. Col. Ellel-lou has just lost his wallet contain-ing his credit cards, Brezhnev's un-listed telepbooe number, the snapshots of his four wives clothed and his mistress in the oude -- not to mention his charisma and his job - at the hands of a thirsty moh driven by "the white devil's offer" of free beer. Moreover, be has sustained "one cracked rib, a fot lip, the removal of [his] shoes, [and] the bestowal of a quantity of derisive spittle." Yet as he says, usually in the third person but now in the first, "I live." It is less a cry of exaltation than an acceptance of the

The land of Kush is a hlighted place. Its ecocomy is based on peaouts which are exported to Mar-seilles where the oil becomes "the basis of heavily perfumed and erotically contoured soaps destioed not for [the colonel's] naturally fragrant and affectionate countrymeo but for the antiseptic lavatories of America — America," as the colooel puts it, "that fountainhead of obscenity and glut." But unfor-mostely the United States bas a surplus of peanuts, which has un-dercut the world market and destroyed the economy of Kush, At the same time, the United States is flying in tons of Corn Curls, Total, Carnatioo milk ("just add water" - but in Kush water is more precious than blood), and cream of celery soup, which the colonel wishes to reject.

"Who're you trying to kid?" an ill-fated AID officer tells the colooel. "These cats are starving. The whole world knows it, you can see even starve on the six o'clock news every night. The American people want to belp. We know this couctry's socialist and xenophobic, we know Ellellou's paranoid and maybe schizo; we don't care. This kind of humanitarian catastrophe cuts across the political lines, as far as my government's concerned."

"Are you aware," the unrecog-nized Ellellou asks him, "that your government's cattle vaccination project increased herd size even as the forage and water of this region were being exhausted?"
"I've read that in some report,"

"And that the deep wells drilled by foreign governments disrupted comadic grazing patterns so that deserts have been created with the wells at their center? Are you

conditions in this region have been the same for five years, that the 'hu aware, furthermore, that climans conditions in this region have been the same for five years, that the him manitarian catastrophe you speak of is to us the human condition?

The colonel, of course, knows lot about the human condition. He is an educated man (McCarth College, Franchise, Wis., in the 50s). He is a passionate advocate of Islamic Marxism, and harbor an equally passionate aversion at the United States. He travels about his country disguised in rags, the his country disguised in rags, the better to mingle with his people in their suffering — followed by hi silver Mercedes. He loves the kin-he deposed, whose head he late severs with his nwn hand, ("A star such as Kush," he remarks, "is to thin to be administered except be gestures.") He knows the Koran every day he says his prayers. Ever night (almost) he struggles vainly; overcome his impotence. He is, i fact, a fascinating man — no mer caricature derived from a cursor reading of Evelyn Waugh's "Blac Mischief" and "Scoop." And he is in the words of his blond uppe middle-class American wife (nur ber two), "the most carcissistic chauvinistic, megalomaniacal, catt tonic, shizoid creep this creepy on tinent ever conjured up."

"Her clinical epithets," the columel says, "reminded me of he book-club books — the warpin rows of volumes imported from hoative land, popular psycholog and socinlogy mostly. How to so ceed, how to be saved, how to sure the mid-life spice hours of fine the mid-life spice. vive the mid-life crisis, how to fur fulfillment within femininity, ho to be free, how to love, bow to fai death, how to harness your fant sies, how to make dollars in yor spare time — the eodless self-le and self-exploration of a performance-oriented race that has nevsettled within itself the fundame tal question of what a man is. man is a clot of blood.

Fundamental questions troub the colonel. He speaks of the net for forgiveness and is asked wh. he had done to forgive. "I was born of a rape," I replies, "And now I govern a star ing land."

The land, however, is not to l starving for long, nor is Ellellou govern it. His austere vision of a Islamic Kush is sold out by the minister of the interior when oil: well as water is discovered in the lippi Rift. ("Prettiest sludge F seen outside of Oklahoma," says U.S. engineer.) The colooel is i ported to be away from the capit on a fact-finding mission, and lat he reads that he has been abduct by leftward-leaning terrorists. It city, rather like Bayonne, the grows up around the oil rigs named Ellellou, after the "Pre-dent-for-Life and Supreme Teacer." Its new drugstore dispens cans of soft drioks, candy-color coodoms and cream-colored vibriors, deodorants and mouthwash Ellellou, shoeless now and unrecenized in his rags, gets a job first a short-order cook io the city, ar then as a parking attendant, belo he extorts a pension from the ne government and moves to a villa the south of France. In that co genial climate be writes, in annymity and silence, these memoir. his face downcast to the cahiers which he pens long tendrils like titendrilous chains of contingen-that have delivered us, each, '. where we sit now oo the skin of the world, waterlilies concealing of ... masses of root."

The Calvinist god - and the gr of Islam, too — may be mercil hut he is also just, and justice. stringent. But surely no one who "Couples" — or any Updike's other books, for that ma ter — would expect Updike's lorview to be a barrel of laugh Humor, though, flashes in the paticulars, and "The Coup" is a ve funoy book as well as a very senot one. It's the work of an intelliged [[1]] and funny and passionate man and it's good.

reached the normal game cootract after opening with a weak two-bid in spades. North, using the Precision System — in which a response of twn oo-trump asks the opener to bid a short suit—was hoping for a three-heart rebid that would open up slam possibilities. When South denied a sbort suit, North settled in game and West led a club.

The opening club lead was ducked, a good technical move to sever the defender's communications. East won and returned a club for want of anything more constructive to dn.

South drew trumps in two rounds eoding io his hand and faced a planning problem. One obvious possibility was to lead the queen of bearts, hoping to develop that suit for diamond discards. This plan would have succeeded, for if West covers with the king, the suit produces three tricks. East would have no safe leave after winning the second round with a jack. If West chose not to cover the queen, a heart ducked to the jack would end-play East.

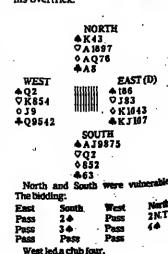

South found a more-esoteric way to make 11 tricks. Instead of playing bearts, he took a diamond finesse, hoping for an even split in that suit to provide a heart discard. East won with a king and should bave returned the suit. Iostead he

He covered sports in America and abroad for the New York Herald Tribune, retiring in 1967 when the paper died. Now 82, he lives quietly in Spring Valley, N.Y. When Al was a school boy in Pensacola, Fla., the Cleveland basely team called the Nanc after ball team, called the Naps after their manager, Napoleon Lajoic, pitched its spring training camp there. "It was a thrilling enough experience." Al has written, "to eak with Joe Jackson and Napoleon Lajoie, but of course they were not the Giants. In those days Chris-Mathewson was a shining knight, and if the Giants won, then were the gods just and life a lyric."

Equal in stature with the princely Mathewson in Al's young eyes was the dramatic figure of Maurice McLoughlin, the "flame-thatched" California Comet of tennis.

Way Back When

Io 1914 Al was on vacation in New York and sat in the stands at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills watching McLoughlin defeat Norman Brookes of Australia, 17-15, 6-3, 6-3, in the historic match in the Davis Cup challenge round that did for tennis in America what Francis Ouimet had done for golf a year earlier by beating Harry Var-don and Ted Ray in the U.S. Open.

Al already had a regular after-school job on the Pensacola Jour-nal and that afternoon at Forest Hills he conceived an ambition to become a tennis writer. In time he covered all sports but it was tennis and golf that brought out his most graceful writing.

The Metropolitan Golf Association citation notes that "Despite his international reputatioo — or because of it — Mr. Laney worked just as hard at covering Met area events as he did at the Masters. No one knew more local golfers and oo one made more visits to local clubs than he. He made his readers aware of golf in their area and thus set a

Planes Spot 2 of 6 Missing In Yacht Race

- Planes searching thousands of square miles of the Atlantic today found two of six singlehanded sailors missing in a race from France to Guadaloupe, Navy headquarters said here

The youngest competitor, 19year-old Yves Le Cornec, was spotted some 270 miles east of the island, apparently in good shape with his yacht doing a steady eight knots.
And Yann Nedelec, also out of contact for weeks, was reported becalmed only a few miles from the finish line. The other sailors beiog sought are Alain Colas, Aline Marchand, Jean-Pierre Barrault and Jacques Palasset. All are French. Of 38 starters, 14 have finished the event, 12 formally abandoned and 8 have been Major concern is being expressed for Colas, one of France's most experienced yachtsmen. In his swift trimaran Manureva, Colas should have finished the race with the winners last week, but has not been heard from since Nov. 16. NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (NYT)— After a record summer on the field, professional baseball turned indoors today for its winter husiness meetings. And, before the week ends, the Boston Red Sox are ex-pected to trade Bill Lee, the Minne-sota Twins may trade Rod Carew, and a formal plan will be offered to restructure the major leagues into three divisions apiece.

The stage for all this activity was set when 2,000 baseball officials converged on Orlando, Fla., from as far away as Japan and Latin America and from the lowest minor leagues to the world champion. New York Yankees. But most of the week's attention will focus on two strenuous efforts that could change the faces of the

Another Free Agent, Barr Of Giants, Joins Angels

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 4 (AP) -The California Angels announced yesterday the signing of Jim Barr, a free-agent pitcher with the San Francisco Giants last season. He was signed to a four-year, $850,000

If the plan is voted, the 14 clubs in the American League and the 12 in the National would be split into three divisions instead of two within each league. The change would take effect in 1980 and it would give four teams in each league a shot at the playoffs, instead of two. and eventually the World Series.

the Super Bowl of the sport.
"But the Mets would be in favor of three divisions and a two-tiered playoff system. It would be a great stimulus to the sport. It would mean that even if you're 10 games behind the leader in September, you still have a shot."

Tn some people, this would defin some people, this would definitely dilute the product because it would subtract some urgency from the 162-game regular seasoo. For example, both the Yankees and the Red Sox would have made the playoff this year, since they ended the regular schedule with identifical records. Then their sudden-death return game would have been reextra game would have been replaced by a playoff, three of five for the right to meet the winner of the parallel playoff.

An informal poll of the 26 teams showed this reaction; nine in favor of the change, two against it, five undecided and 10 not disclosing their inclination. On the allied sug-gestinn for some interleague games during the regular season, the poll showed six in favor, five against, one undecided and four interested

Heavyweights Heave Lightened Dollar

WASHINGTON — The presi-dent pushed a button and Gerry Rafshoon immediately showed up in the Oval Office.
"Gerry," the president asked.

"what are you going to do today to improve my image?" Raishoon was stumped. It was the first day since he took oo the job as President Carter's image-maker that he nadn't come up with an idea.

Maybe we could fly over York state in a beticopter and see the snow damage.' Rafshoon said.

"Was there much snow damage in New York?"
"No." Rafshoon said, "but that would be good for your image. I cao see the headline now: 'President Inspects Lack of Snow Damage in New York State. Says His Anti-Snow Policy Is Paying Off." "I think you're reaching Gerry. Iso't there anything I could do to dramatize my fight against infla-

Rafshoon looked out the window. Suddenly he said, "I think I have it. Why don't you throw a silver dollar across the Potomac to show how much faith you have in our monetary system? The last one who did it was George Washing-

The president thought about it a moment. "Can you really throw a dollar across the Potomac? I thought the Washingtoo silver dol-lar legend was discredited by Jack Anderson in ooe of his columns." "Anderson printed the story

Love Signs' Sets Record

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP) — Harper & Row bas sold to Fawcett Books Group the paperback rights to Linda Goodman's "Love Signs," a book about astrological match-making, for $2,250,000, the highest price ever paid for a nonfiction book. The book explores the likely relationships between males and females, males and other males, and females and other females based oo their birth dates.

Potomac."
"But," the president said, "if you made a dollar into a paper airplane, and the wind was blowing right, you could sail it across the Poto-mac. I tearned that at Annapolis."

"It's too risky, Mr. President, If you sailed a paper dollar across the Potomac as an airplane, and it oose-dived into the water, the dollar would sink on every money market in the world. I think we should stay with a silver dollar."

President Carter said, "There's one thing wrong with your plan.
Gerry. The silver dollar is out of circulatioo — the new dollars are much smaller, and if I'm going to throw one I will need all the weight

I can get. "We could have the Treasury make a special silver dollar with tiny jets in it which could give it enough lift to get to the other side." "That would be cheating. Gerry.

and I promised the people I would oever lie to them. We have to have someone else try to throw it over secretly, to see if it can actually be done. I doo't want to go out there oo the banks of the river with all the press covering me and fail to do "Good thinking, Mr. President. We could get someooe from the Washington Redskins to try it out first. The question is, should it he Joe Theismann or Billy Kilmer?"

"They both could be sacked," the president said. "Can't we find someone in the government?" What about Mike Blumenthal? He's secretary of the Treasury. If the press finds out about it, be could always say he was testing the new American silver dollar to see if it would fly." "All right. Get back to me and let me know if it's possible."

Rafshooo returned a few days later, shaken. "Blumenthal threw a silver dollar with all his might and it only went halfway across the Potomac."

'How did he explain it?" "He showed me the labor statistics for November. It seems the dollar will only go half as far as it did 10 years ago." By Paul Hendrickson

WASHINGTON (WP) - Alfred Kahn, Who doesn't know one airplane from the next and who once said he felt like tell-ing Pam Am to go to hell (and later added he didn't have in mind a new route), is boarding a Northwest Orient 727 at National Airport. At the plane's door, propped upright, is a guitar case. "Momm," Kahn says, "I think if it's under 12 it should at least get half fare."

He could almost make it as a stand-up comic, a Henny Youngman of the bureauc-racy belt, this thin, small, 61-year-old man with balding head and comic-opera face. Strapped in his coach seat in, one leg propped up on a huge orange briefcase, he suddenly confides, almost whispers: "It's very important to realize you're not God." Not that it's all just yuks and good times with Jimmy Carter's chief inflation fighter. There is a warty, lizard toughness to Kahn, too, something that helps explain his star-tling 16-month success as chairman of the Civil Aeronaudes Board, when America's airlines cut their fares like confetti - and began to realize the biggest profits in histo-ry. That was Kahn's doing.

He came to Washington a year and a half-ago, not exactly kicking and screaming; he still takes the subway to work, still swims in the neighborhood pool, still sometimes pads around the office in his socks. He is the kind of anti-hurrowerst who can say:

around the office in his socks. He is the kind of anti-bureaucrat who can say:

"Look, I wake up every morning and tell myself this whole thing's a joke. You know: cover of Newsweck with the president, guest shots on 'Meet the Press.' It's a play, a performance. I'm always prepared that it's Sunday night and the curtain's coming down. A year from now people will say, 'Who's he?' And that'll be all right." Kahn says this staccato, like most everything else. Only there's oo punch line. oo punch line.

Bookkeeper Look

He looks a little like a small, furious bookkeeper. At 30,000 feet somewhere between Detroit and Milwaukee, the escaped economics professor from Cornell is buried in a spiral notebook full of arrows, exclamation points and all manner of marginalia jokes, dates, percentage points. There are scribblings in black ballpoint and blue. The black ones are from last week's talk (Hart-ford), the blue from the week before (St. Louis). "Just to show you I'm always evolving." he says.

The one-time college dean glances up, peering through thick, tortoise shell-rimmed glasses. He can't recall a statistic. He pounds a fist in mock fury. "It must have been that drink I had last night,"

"But, Fred, you didn't have a drink last night," says Mary Kahn, a kindly, quiet, grandmotherly woman who still looks confused by her husband of 35 years. "Oh. It must bave been that drink I thought I had last night."

The man across the aisle, having recognized Kahn, wants to shake hands. "Oh, I'm delighted," says Kahn. "I'll have to be care-

He en people around nim use plain English. He recounts this, smiling a villain's grin. "I told our lawyers, 'Look, why doo't you go home and try talking like that to your children, and if they doo't laugh you out of the room. . . well, who wants children like that?"

Workaholic

By his own admission, Kahn is a workaholic. People around him find they generally keep the same pace. Or quir. He swims and jogs and skis. He can talk you down. He will quote Robert Burns and sing Gilbert and Sullivan. He says he would trade his whole career for the role of the lawyer in "A Little Night Music." It's nothing for him to read The New York Times, watch the evening oews, and dictate chan-ing for him to read The New York Times, watch the evening oews, and dictate chapters of his latest book — all at once. "My record is four things at once." he says.

But the economy has taken center stage. Is there a danger in the country getting "monomaniacal" about inflation? "I already said that in an interview," be says, before the question is fully out. "Don't quote me to

New York with a musician ("We call him the spouse equivalent") has been hamming his way from one success to another for over three decades — ever since be left Yale with a Ph.D. in economics. (He had earlier graduated, at 18; summa cum laude from New York University.) His career has consisted of stints in the army and the antitrust divi-sion of the Justice Department, of writing landmark books on the economics of regulation, of serving on boards with such names as the National Academy of Sciences Advisory Review Committee oo Sulfur Dioxide

Mostly, though, it has consisted of college teaching Kahn put in 27 years at Cornell, where he still has tenure and a fine old house oear Lake Cayuga, and where he was alternately chairman of the economics department, a member of the board of trustees, and dean of arts and sciences. "A dean is to a faculty as a hydrant is to a dog," says Kahn, his pan dead as dishwater.

Kahn recently made headlines by saying the country could be in store for a "deep, deep depression." The next morning, the president of the United States labeled that idle talk." Kahn then started referring to a "deep banana."

The depression remark prompted White House communications assistant Gerald Rafshooo to say later that "Kahn has just got to learn to tone it down - and that you just don't have to answer all the questions all of the time."

Kahn responds that, "It's an interesting dilemma that I've never confronted before. Twe been a professor most of my life, and I've oever felt compelled for diplomatic rea-ing the time of his life.

In fact, what Kahn sometimes wonders late at night now is whether he could ever go back to that sherry-and-camembert cocooo be came from (though he thinks cocoon is the wrong word). He's had a gulp of fame, warmed his hands at the media fire. Going back to a world of theory might seem like

Florida retirement. "It was a potential I always secretly thought I had, doing this," he says. "It's a new flowering. It's exhilarating." Yes, he knows he's been "picked up" by the president for this fight. That's okay: He deserved to be picked up, he thinks. He was the best free agent for the job. There was a demonstrable success behind him. Washington loves demonstrable success. loves demonstrable successes,

Jerry Lewis Reveals PEOPLE: '73 Suicide Attempt

He's one of Hollywood's great and Colorado, and medical official funnymen, but Jerry Lewis wasn't langhing five years ago when he stood in the bathroom of his Bel Air, Calif., home and pressed a .38-caliber revolver to the roof of his mouth. Lewis says in the current issue of People magazine he was driven to the brink of suicide by his addiction to Percodan a painkiller he began taking io 1965 after injuring his spine in a pratfall. Says the 52-year-old comic, "Thank God I heard my children laughing and running through the hall. That snapped me out of it." Lewis says he's oow beaten both the pain and the drug dependency with the help of his longtime friend, famed heart specialist Dr. Michael DeBakey.

Stars blazed in Washington in Stars blazed in Washington in honor of America's greatest musical artists, as designated by the Kennedy Center — Marian Anderson, Fred Astaire, George Ralanchine, Richard Rodgers and Artur Rubinstein. Aretha Franklin, introduced by Harry Belgionte, sang in tribote to Miss Anderson, Florence Henderson, introduced by Mary Henderson, introduced by Mary Marin, sang several of Rodgers' compositions. President Carter bosted a pre-show reception at the White House, but in performance, it was 83-year-old blues singer Alberta Hunter who swiped the spotlight, drawing thunderous demand for an encore - which she punctuated with an elaborate wink at Carter before leaving the stage.

The troubles of Dr. Peter Bourne continue. The former White House adviser oo drug abuse, forced in resign after it was disclosed that he had written a drug prescription us-ing a fictious name for a staff member, has been asked by the Georgia medical examining board to attend a Dec. 12 hearing in con-nection with the false prescription. which was for Qualude, a powerful sedative.
